Sky dragons are colossal creatures, their wingspans reaching upwards of a hundred feet. Their bodies are covered in shimmering scales, the colors and patterns of which vary greatly from dragon to dragon. Their intelligence allows them to form strong bonds with humans, and their presence brings a sense of security and wonder to those who have the privilege of interacting with them.

However, sky dragons are not without their fierce side. When threatened, they can unleash a devastating array of fire, claws, and teeth. Their aerial agility makes them formidable opponents, and their ability to breathe fire at will makes them capable of incinerating any who dare to challenge them.

Role in Pernese Society: The Keystone of Civilization

The unbreakable bond between a dragonrider and their dragon, forged through mutual trust and shared experiences.

The bond between a dragonrider and their dragon is the cornerstone of Pernese society. It is a symbiotic relationship, where each party relies on the other for survival and companionship. Dragonriders are selected through a rigorous process called Impressing, where young people touch a group of unhatched dragon eggs. Those who successfully Impress form an unbreakable bond with the dragon that emerges from the egg.

This bond is more than just a connection between two individuals. It is a spiritual and physical union, where the dragon and rider become one entity. They share thoughts, emotions, and experiences, and their destinies are intertwined.
