The election was held on November 3, 2020, and the results were not known for several days. Joe Biden, the Democratic candidate, ultimately defeated Donald Trump, the Republican incumbent. Biden won the popular vote by more than 7 million votes and the Electoral College by 306 to 232.

Trump refused to concede defeat and made baseless allegations of voter fraud. He and his supporters filed numerous lawsuits challenging the results of the election, but all of these lawsuits were unsuccessful.

On January 6, 2021, a mob of Trump supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol Building in an attempt to overturn the results of the election. The rioters breached the Capitol and forced members of Congress to evacuate. Five people died in the riot, including one Capitol Police officer.

The Role of the President

The president of the United States is the head of state and government. The president is responsible for enforcing the laws of the United States, conducting foreign policy, and commanding the armed forces.

In the lead-up to the 2020 election, Trump repeatedly made false claims about the election being rigged. He also urged his supporters to "fight like hell" to keep him in office.

After the election, Trump refused to concede defeat and continued to make baseless allegations of voter fraud. He also pressured state officials to overturn the results of the election.

Trump's actions following the election were widely condemned by both Democrats and Republicans. Many people accused him of inciting the violence at the Capitol on January 6.

The Role of the President-Elect

The president-elect is the person who has been elected to be the next president of the United States. The president-elect is not yet the president, but he or she is entitled to receive briefings on national security and other important matters.

In the lead-up to the 2020 election, Biden repeatedly called for unity and healing. He also pledged to work with both Democrats and Republicans to address the challenges facing the country.

After the election, Biden met with Trump and other administration officials to discuss the transition of power. He also began to assemble his own team of advisors and cabinet members.

Biden's actions following the election were widely praised by both Democrats and Republicans. Many people saw him as a calming and unifying force in a time of great uncertainty.

The 2020 presidential election was a watershed moment in American history. The outcome of the election had a profound impact on the future of the country, and the events leading up to and following the election are still being debated today.

The role of the president and the president-elect in the 2020 election was significant. Trump's actions following the election were widely condemned, while Biden's actions were widely praised.

The 2020 presidential election is a reminder of the importance of democracy and the rule of law. It is also a reminder of the power of the presidency and the importance of choosing wisely.
